On June 11, 1963, Vivian Malone, under the escort of the U.S. National Guard, was the first African American student to enroll at the University of Alabama while Governor George Wallace stood at the door of Foster Auditorium barring her entrance and declaring his opposition to her admission. She graduated in 1965 with a degree in Business Education. She's currently the Regional Director of the U.S. Office of Environmental Justice in Atlanta. Ms. Malone is also actively involved in numerous civic and community organizations, including the National Council of Negro Women, the Board of the University Capstone Business League, the Auxiliary to the Atlanta Medical Association, and the Advisory Committee to the Florida A&M University Environmental Science Institute, among others.
